

U of A Gets $22 M of $48 M Hike to Endowment and Incentive Fund

The $80 million Advanced Education Endowment and Incentive Fund has been increased by $48 million, $22 million of which will be directed to the University of Alberta.

"The most optimistic timeline I can give you is the end of January," Bing Mah, manager of the

(A portion of the University of Alberta's allocation will be held back until various pledges made via the Project Leadership Campaign are honored.)

Advanced Education Minister Dave Russell announced the expansion of the two-year-old Fund (it took up where the 1980's Endowment Fund left off) in Calgary.

The increase, Mr. Russell notes, was needed to match additional donations and pledges of individual Albertans, alumni and businesses.

At the University of Alberta, the Endowment and Incentive Fund has been instrumental in the establishment of such research and teaching thrusts as the Peter Jacyk Chair in Ukrainian Studies, the Jarislowsky Chair in Business, and the Toupin Chair in Neurological Sciences. The Jacyk Chair and the Jarislowsky Chair each received a matching grant of $1 million; the Toupin Chair received a matching grant of $800,000.

The Jacyk Chair is affiliated with the Peter Jacyk Centre for Ukrainian Historical Research at the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies. Last summer Mr. Jacyk, a resident of Mississauga, Ontario, donated $1 million to the University to establish the centre.

The Stephen Jarislowsky Chair in Finance was made possible by a private gift of $500,000 and Advanced Education's two for one matching program. The Faculty of Business wants to build on existing strengths and the Jarislowsky Chair is a prominent aspect of that plan.

The Henri M. Toupin Chair in Neurological Sciences is "one of several well-defined major projects which will come to fruition during our 75th Anniversary endowment fund campaign 'Preparing Physicians for the Future'," says Douglas Wilson, Dean of Medicine.

Including the soon-to-be-released grant, the University has received a total of $69,470,000 from the two programs.

The province's public postsecondary institutions have benefited to the extent of some $385 million in new government and private funds since 1981.

Last week's adjustment, however, signalled the end of the Endowment and Incentive Fund. A successor program is planned. □

Smokers' Cessation Awareness Workshop

National Non-Smoking Week may be winding down, but the University of Alberta is gearing up for a Smokers' Cessation Awareness Workshop on Monday, 20 February, from 9 a.m. to noon in Lister Hall. All interested staff and students are invited.

'Beyond Boundaries': Faculty of Arts Lecture Series

The Faculty of Arts is sponsoring three special lectures this term by scholars noted both for their important contributions to specific disciplines and for their fruitful explorations across disciplinary boundaries. The speakers are Francis Sparshott, Constance Penley, and Charles Taylor.

Sparshott is a University Professor at the University of Toronto. He is the author of several scholarly books, primarily in aesthetics. Princeton University Press has just released his Off the Ground: First Steps to a Philosophical Consideration of the Art of Dance. Sparshott has also published several volumes of poetry. He has served as president of the League of Canadian Poets, as well as president of the Canadian Philosophical Association and the ican Society for Aesthetics. He is an associate professor in the departments of English and Film Studies at the University of Rochester. She has published numerous articles on film studies, television, feminism, and psychoanalysis. She is a co-editor of Camera Obscura: A Journal of Feminism and Film Theory. Routledge has just published Feminism and Film Theory, a collection edited by Penley.

Taylor is a professor of both Philosophy and Political Science at McGill University. He has taught at Princeton, where he was also a member of the Institute for Advanced Studies, and at Berkeley. He was until 1981 Chichele Professor of Political Science and Social Theory at Oxford University. His last two books, Human Agency and Language and Philosophy of the Human Sciences, were published by Cambridge University Press in 1985. Taylor has served as vice-president of the federal NDP and as president of the Quebec NDP.

It is the hope of the new administration in the Faculty of Arts that these speakers will help to stimulate reflection and discussion on the nature and possibilities of creative exploration in the Arts disciplines. The series has been made possible in large part due to the support of the Vice-President (Academic). Everyone is most cordially invited to attend these lectures.

(Francis Sparshott: "Culture and the Arts Today," Tuesday, 24 January, 4 p.m. in B-2 Tory Building. Professor Sparshott will also give a poetry reading, sponsored by the Department of English, on 24 January, 12:30 p.m. in L-3 Humanities Centre. Constance Penley, "Romantic Pornography: On Female Fandom," Monday, 27 February, at 4 p.m. in B-2 Tory Building. Charles Taylor, "Cross Purposes: The Liberal/Communitarian Debate," Friday, 10 March, at 4 p.m. in B-2 Tory Building.) □

McCalla Professors Appointed

To date, eight faculty members have been named McCalla Professors for 1989-90. They are: Lorraine Wilgosh (Educational Psychology), Tom Kieren (Secondary Education), R.G. Holland (Restorative Dentistry), C.B. Dunlop (Law), Colin Hoskins (Finance and Management Science), G. Barone-Adesi (Finance and Management Science), J.J. Louviere (Marketing and Economic Analysis), and M.W. Wolowyk (Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences).

An article on Professor Wilgosh appears in this issue. Reportage on her fellow McCalla Professors will ensue. □

Make Inflation Rates a Product of Fiscal Policy, Scarth of McMaster University Argues

William Scarth of McMaster University spoke on "Canadian Monetary Policy: the Current Dilemma" on 12 January. Dr. Scarth is on campus for two weeks as Distinguished Visitor in Economics.

Professor Scarth reviewed monetary policies and their outcomes, noting that policy-makers often have been slow to recognize the merit of economic theory over the last 40 years. The current dilemma facing the Bank of Canada, he said, is whether to continue to control inflation—as the Bank Act mandates—or to let the inflation rate stand, recognizing that the federal government's refusal to trim deficits is a clear signal that the government does not want further disinflation. Dr. Scarth drew on macroeconomic theory and evidence in recommending the latter choice.

Over the last 14 years, central banking authorities have brought the inflation rate down from 12 percent to 4 percent. However, Dr. Scarth said, that course has ignored the link between inflation and unemployment, and continuing to push for zero inflation will have a high cost. The lower the inflation rate goes, the longer and more serious the recession that always accompanies disinflation.

Furthermore, Dr. Scarth cautioned, macroeconomic stability is fundamentally threatened when the central bank tries to fight inflation while the Department of Finance runs a large spending deficit at the same time. "The inexorable outcome of this combination of tight monetary policy and loose fiscal policy is an ever-growing international indebtedness," he said.

Professor Scarth said he blames the fiscal authorities for failing to reduce deficits. "When you look at a whole decade worth of fiscal policy, refusing to trim that deficit, the government is essentially telling [the central bank], 'Look, we don't really want you to fight inflation.'"

At the same time, Dr. Scarth laid blame on the banking authorities for "carrying on as if the fiscal authority is being responsible." By setting inflation policy itself, the Bank is forcing the government to adjust taxes and spending, so fiscal policy has to react to monetary policy. That, Dr. Scarth argues, creates a vicious circle of increasing indebtedness. Capping inflation forces a high proportion of bond-financing, which in the long run increases the federal deficit because of the high interest rates that government must pay in order to make bonds attractive to buyers.

A better system, in Professor Scarth's view, would make inflation rates a product of fiscal policy. The fiscal authority would determine taxes and spending, and the central bank would print money accordingly. If the central bank covered more of the deficit than its anti-inflation stance has allowed, then the only way to reduce inflation would be to trim federal deficits.

That would make the government of the day responsible for inflation and accountable for it. Dr. Scarth observed, "It doesn't seem to me to be very democratic to have a non-elected body essentially dictating the fundamental economic policy of the country."□

Applications Requested for Study at Lviv University

Exchanges between the University of Alberta and Lviv University are continuing under the two-year agreement signed last year.

Under the agreement, which concerns the humanities and social sciences fields, one student from our University may undertake up to 10 months of study at Lviv, and one or two scholars may undertake research for a period of either three or six months.

Students and scholars selected for the exchange will have return transportation to the Soviet Union paid. Tuition and accommodation will be provided by Lviv University. A monthly stipend will be provided in rubles.

Staff and students interested in being considered for this exchange should call 432-2280, or write to the Associate Vice-President (International Affairs), 3-12A University Hall, for an application form.

The completed application, with documentation (including three letters of recommendation) must reach that office no later than 4 p.m., 20 February.

It is important that applicants provide a well-thought-out and well-defined statement of program of study or research. The type location of archival or research materials to be consulted must be clearly indicated.□

Director of Student Counselling Services Finds Student's Resources Best Starting Point

"Counselling Our Students" was the topic of the latest faculty breakfast and dialogue at St. Joseph's College (11 January). Guest speaker was Allen Vander Well, Director of Student Counselling Services.

Dr. Vander Well clarified the impact personal problems can have on a student's academic performance by asking the audience to imagine having a large rock dropped on their foot, and then trying to concentrate through the pain and swelling the next day. He explained, "The kinds of rocks that become people's problems of course are not necessarily the ones they drop on their feet, but they have an equal impact. They become pretty serious impediments to an individual's ability to focus on what is important on a day-to-day basis."

Dr. Vander Well's approach in counselling is to look at the individual's resources more than at their problems. He said, "I have become much less problem-focused and much more focused on how I can utilize whatever that person is bringing to me, to get them back on their feet and going again."

While personal counselling accounts for most of the time spent with clients at Student Counselling, many other kinds of help are also available. Career counselling resources help students explore lifestyle preferences and non-professional goals along with career options, and there are seminars on study skills and test anxiety reduction. Self-help groups focus on a variety of topics such as stress management and self-esteem.□

Profile: Jean Lueck, Supervisor, Duplicating and Mail Services, Faculty of Extension

Jean Lueck "looks after" the incoming and outgoing mail for the Faculty of Extension—about 120 staff in 20 departments. Sounds simple enough at first—until a look at the figures reveals that involves some 400,000 items a year. Her budget for postage tops $164,000.

The busy office is at its busiest during the summer and in December when course brochures go out to the public ("It gets crazy!") but Lueck, who's been Faculty of Extension supervisor of duplicating and mail services for three years, insists she likes the hectic pace of the job, her first permanent, full-time position in 34 years. "I really never have a spare minute and I thoroughly enjoy it." In fact, she's known for getting along well with people, and what's more, says she never gets frustrated or uptight. "I've always been calm."

How does she keep her cool?

"Being able to manage time well, something I learned from managing a family and working, is important," says Lueck, mother of five. "I think that's the secret."

Lueck supervises the bulk shipments of brochures, coordinating them so they meet tight deadlines. The work is slower now than it was three years ago before the labels were done on the computer. "You were given 20,000 names and none were in postal code order." Postal code sorting was done by hand and it would take four women four days to work through a room piled with brochures. Now it takes two people two days tops, says Lueck. Accuracy is top priority, she comments. "They have to be 100 percent accurate or the post office won't accept them."

She handles "everyday" mail herself, three times a day, metering and sealing outgoing items, sorting for in and out of town, campus or courier. When mail arrives, she sorts it, opens it if it's not personally addressed, date-stamps registrations, distributes items to the mailroom boxes and picks up outgoing mail. She orders postage checks, charging relevant expenses to each department. Meanwhile, she's coordinating her unit's work with the rest of the Faculty and answering a myriad of questions advising people about mailing requirements.

Lueck also makes coffee for Extension staff, noting that, "If you forget it, that's about the worst thing you can do." She prepares two 100-cup urns a day, plus tea and hot chocolate, and supplies coffee for Faculty of Extension seminars. And finally, she and her staff do all the faculty xeroxing: "The machine goes steady seven hours a day," says Lueck. "It never stops."

Jean Lueck is making the most of her first permanent, full-time position in more than 30 years.

Born in Edgerton, Alberta, Lueck graduated from Old Strathcona High School and has lived in Edmonton most of her life. She moved to the Bonnie Doon/Capilano area more than 30 years ago. "It was our starter house and we're still in it." When her family was younger, Lueck taught Sunday school, canvassed for the cancer fund, served on the community league executive and worked part-time in offices or sales before joining the University staff.

To relax, she reads (mostly fiction) and crochets. In the summer, she escapes to her cabin at the lake to swim and fish, and she enjoys walking and, "once the snow goes," biking around the city. But she draws the line at outdoor work. "I hate gardening," she admits, "my husband does all the yardwork."

On the job, Lueck enjoys the challenge of trying to keep up with the constant workload. She tries to have a clear desk when she leaves each night. "I can do it most of the time," she smiles. □

Lorraine Wilgosh: McCalla Professor

Lorraine Wilgosh has been interested in career education and vocational training for people with mental handicaps for some 20 years; her McCalla Professorship gives her nine uninterrupted months to devote to the subject.

It was after her move to Educational Psychology, following a brief period with Student Counselling, that Dr. Wilgosh recognized a lack of clear curricular direction and focus in school programs for children with mild to moderate mental handicaps. She also saw a lack of parental involvement in educational planning for the children. These realizations led her to direct her research to issues in assessment and training of life and vocational skills for individuals with mental handicaps as well as the involvement of their parents as direct partners in the educational planning and teaching process.

During her Professorship, Dr. Wilgosh will write a "families' handbook" which will provide information about a wide range of handicapping conditions, as well as common and more specific concerns. The publication will be suitable for parents and practitioners working with the families. It will cover major themes identified in her research on families, related to stresses and coping strategies, parent-professional relationships, and sources of support for families (complete with anecdotes and illustrations from parent interview data).

Wilgosh

It is Dr. Wilgosh's intent that the handbook help parents and professionals work more comprehensively with the total child in her/his environment.

A second major project during Dr. Wilgosh's McCalla Professorship will be to develop instruments for assessing vocational interests and skills at secondary and postsecondary levels. In her work she has found that many people with mental handicaps are receiving little in the way of functional, community-based vocational training. She has also addressed the issue of which work skills to train, and the problems in assessing vocational preferences for this population. This part of her McCalla will be the culminating activity for the current research program. It will be the beginning of a longitudinal study of the long-term usefulness of procedures in planning and implementing career educational programs for young people with mental handicaps.

Dr. Wilgosh joined the University in 1971 following several years as a staff psychologist with the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto. She holds BA and master's degrees from the University of Manitoba, a BEd/AD from the University of Alberta, and a doctorate from McMaster University. □

'Vice-Principal Davenport on a Rocky Mountain High,' According to The [McGill] Reporter

Since his appointment to the presidency of the University of Alberta, McGill's Vice-Principal Planning and Computer Services, Paul Davenport, has felt a combination of "delight and terror".

"If you'd asked me a year ago if I saw myself going in that direction, I'd have said 'no'," said Davenport, 42, of his rapid rise to the top. He has been Vice-Principal at McGill for only two-and-a-half years.

Principal David Johnston considers the Edmonton university's decision "superb, it's absolutely great for the University of Alberta." And he noted with pride McGill's history of providing leadership to western universities . . . [McGill] University administrator, Henry Marshall Tory, in 1908 became the first president of the University of Alberta.

Davenport would not comment on whether he was an applicant to replace Principal Johnston, whose term expires in August. He cited the confidentiality of the search procedure as his reason for silence.

In addition to being a McGill Vice-Principal, Davenport has been both Vice-President of the Faculty Association and Associate Dean of the Graduate Faculty. "I've eased into it," he said of university administration.

Part of that "easing in" was a 1986 trip to the University of Alberta to study their computing system. "I was very impressed not only with their equipment and service, but with the efficiency. Never did I dream . . ."

Davenport will be heading west with his wife, Josette, and their three children, Eric, 15, Leslie, 10, and Audrey, 3. He said his children have been supportive, "but they're going to miss their friends."

He knows the move will be difficult for them. "I moved when I was 15," he recalls, "and boy, that was tough." The U of A president-designate describes his skiing ability as "vague", but promises that he and his family will learn.

One of his family's greatest regrets has been taking Leslie out of the Les Grands Ballets Canadiens school, where she has just been accepted. But Davenport said his wife has found two fine ballet schools in Edmonton.

Cross-continent travel is not new to Davenport. Born and raised in Princeton, New Jersey, he went to California for his undergraduate degree, at Stanford. Graduation took him to the graduate economics program at the University of Toronto.

"I saw myself staying for a master's year," he said of his initial Toronto plan, but he and his wife loved it so much, they stayed through his doctorate. He graduated, and received an appointment to McGill's Department of Economics in 1973.

While the big move does not occur until 1 August 1989, Davenport has already been scouting for houses. He noted happily that home prices in Edmonton are much lower than they are in Montreal. □

Time to Apply for University Management Course

The 1989 University Management Course, sponsored by the Canadian Association of University Business Officers, will be held at the Banff Centre, 10 to 17 June.

During the past eight years, more than 320 administrators, representing 37 universities across Canada, have participated in the annual professional development program.

The course includes lectures and group discussions focusing heavily on case studies and small group exercises. It provides an overview of university management in the areas of organizational behavior, labor relations, management of change and stress, finance, and reporting systems.

The UMC is designed for administrators with direct responsibilities for recommending and implementing policy either within units or on a university-wide basis.

The schedule is rigorous; participants should expect to work evenings.

This year, the University of Alberta will sponsor one (and perhaps two) Administrative Professional Officers at the UMC.

Applications are invited from APOs. They must be supported by a direct supervisor as well as the department head (in support departments), or the dean (in teaching departments and in Faculties), or another senior administrator.

Department heads and deans may submit nominations for APOs but should have the nominee(s) complete an application form.

To apply or nominate, request an application form from: The Secretary, Advisory Committee on Professional Development for APOs, 3-13 University Hall. Telephone: 432-4588.

The deadline for applications is 3 February 1989.

For further information, call Brian McDonald, Chair of the Advisory Committee (432-4955), or Eva Cherniavsky, Committee Secretary (432-4588). □

Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute Eyes Expansion

The Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute takes on both the difficult and time-consuming, like helping Canadian scholars clear research through appropriate government channels in India, and the seemingly mundane, like helping visiting professors clear tape recorders through customs, explains Regula Qureshi, Director of Shastri's committee on campus.

A national organization with head offices in Delhi and Calgary, Shastri is funded by both the Canadian and Indian governments. The institute tries to promote academic relations and mutual understanding between the two countries. It offers fellowships to faculty and pre- and post-doctoral students for research, study and language training in India, and to performing artists. The institute also has visiting scholar and Canadian Studies programs.

Since 1977-78, the University of Alberta has been one of the member Canadian universities of Shastri and academics and students here have participated in fellowship programs and have hosted visiting Indian lecturers. As well, the University has received a library allocation from Shastri each year and has acquired various books and research materials published in India. "The disciplinary core of the institute has been the social sciences and humanities," says Dr. Qureshi. "More recently we are looking at expanding that . . . more and more, there is an interest in development, education and the science fields."

Shastri's visiting scholar programs are also being expanded, notes Dr. Qureshi. Last fall, Mahmudul Haq, a specialist in West Asian studies, came to speak in the Departments of Political Science and Religious Studies. Currently, several Indian academics who are visiting other universities in North America are available to come here as well. Dr. Qureshi has relayed information to the relevant departments and requests can be forwarded to a Shastri executive committee member—Dr. Qureshi (Music), S. Malhotra, (Zoology), B. Sinha (Psychology), S. Subbarao, (Entomology), and E. Waugh, (Religious Studies).

And with a new emphasis on reciprocity, the programs now focus more on Canadian Studies in India. Consequently, Afzal Khan, whose research area is Canadian Literature, visited both Comparative Literature and Canadian Studies in November.

In the past, Shastri has held exhibits, a conference and lecture/recitals on campus, and Dr. Qureshi indicates they are planning something new. "We want to create a focus for Indian Studies on campus. We hope to bring people together to create a meeting ground, either in collaboration with the Committee for African and South Asian Area Studies or under the banner of Shastri." □

Campus Reviews

As part of the process of carrying out systematic reviews under the guidance of the President's Advisory Committee on Campus Reviews (PACCR), the Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology is completing the self-study phase of the review process. The other major phase of the process is the site visit and assessment by the Unit Review Committee on 8, 9, and 10 February 1989.

In preparation for this second phase, PACCR invites written comment prior to 7 February 1989. Submissions are for the use of the Unit Review Committee and will be held in confidence by the members of that committee.

Submissions should be sent to: Mrs. Shirley Moore, Coordinator, PACCR Office, W4-13 Chemistry Building, Attention: The Speech Pathology and Audiology Unit Review Committee.

The information is searchable by topic, and citations can be incorporated into a bibliographic database on a personal computer. Everyone is welcome.

Farewell Reception for Peter Freeman

Peter Freeman, Chief Librarian and Director of Libraries, is leaving the University Library in February 1989 to assume the position of Secretary of the Law Society of Alberta in Calgary.

Mr. Freeman began his career at the University of Alberta in 1968 as a Professor of Law, and served as Law Librarian from 1970 to 1980. He left to take up an appointment as Librarian to the Supreme Court in Ottawa, and returned to the University as Chief Librarian in 1982.

A farewell reception will be held for Mr. Freeman in the Upper Lounge of the Faculty Club on Tuesday, 31 January, 3 to 5 p.m. All his friends and colleagues are invited to attend.

Anyone wishing to contribute towards a gift should send cash, or a cheque made payable to the University of Alberta, to Marlene Sherban, Financial Systems and Analysis, Cameron Library, before 20 January.

DON'T CHEAT YOURSELF OUT OF $250,000

By not carefully considering your RSP alternatives now, you could be cheating yourself for the rest of your life. At ScotiaMcLeod, we want you to know how you can retire wealthier and save more taxes today, so we've published a booklet, "10 Ways You Could Be Cheating Yourself At RSP-Time". By following just one of the strategies in our booklet, you could have a quarter of a million dollars more for your retirement!

Example: If you were to invest $7,500 at 10% over 25 years, you would have $737,602 on your retirement. If, however, you invested the same amount at 12% over the same time period, you would have $999,975 at retirement...a difference of a quarter of a million dollars!

These techniques have proven effective for our thousands of ScotiaMcLeod clients and they can help you too!
